

Queen Cutlery Guide

Queen City, 1922-1944 & Queen Cutlery Company, 1945 – 2012.

Queen City has not produced any catalogs that have been found by collectors and did not place model numbers on knives. So, many collectors will use model numbers from Queen Cutlery (See below) to describe similar knives from Queen City. For example, the 7th edition of the Sargent's Guide, 2008, uses the convention of applying Queen Numbers whenever feasible for knives back in the Queen City era.

While Queen used model numbers very consistently, there were changes over time as new knife patterns became popular. Those changes will be shown in the Model number list below, based on catalog use at the time.

With Servotronics leadership completing a company reorientation beginning in 1972, Queen began experimenting with new, short duration Series of knives, all with a variety of new format model numbers, such as Hawk Series, Rawhide Series, Chipped Bark Series, and many more. The following list is what Queen used for their basic pocket knife line and does not include "unusual" models such as scissors, axes, commemoratives or series. The best bet is to consult a "Guide" the Series of interest to you. Daniels Family Ownership used some of these numbers but also added new model number changes as they experimented with adding traditional knife pattern favorites to their line. Consult the section of model numbers in their listing.
